

Beginning with the Industrial Revolution, mass production has elevated the fashion industry to a major polluter of natural resources, second to oil. This digital collection explores the idea of viewing our natural resources as sacred and revisits the silhouettes of the Industrial Revolution. It asks, “what would the world look like today if we had started with sustainability in mind?” It is inspired by the “Fashion and Nature” exhibit at the Grand Rapids Public Museum, Tiffany Windows depicting nature as sacred, the sustainable work of Ronald Van Der Kemp and the creativity of Viktor & Rolf. All designs are intended to be constructed with repurposed and deadstock materials. The following pages are a sample from the collection.

Digital Fabrication

Using Adobe Illustrator and a laser cutter, I etched Norwegian inspired art into corduroy fabric and cut and etched wood to create buttons. Through draping and pattern alteration, I turned the fabric and buttons into a lined, oversized jacket. I created a 3D design in Rhino and made Norwegian folk ark inspired pendants and buttons that were 3D printed. I am excited to do more digital fabrication in future designs.

Designing for Butterick Patterns

Responsibilities

As the new designer for Butterick's Palmer/Pletsch line of patterns, my job is to propose designs based on future trends and the teaching needs of Palmer/Pletsch Certified Sewing Instructors. I research trends using industry resources such as WGSN, BoF, Vogue, and others. I look to see what is on the runway for future seasons as well as what is currently in retail. Then I propose my ideas including digital flats created in Illustrator. After designs are selected and I consult on design details, the patternmaking team drafts the patterns to the company's standard and creates a first muslin. I suggest changes and approve the design. I make adjustments to and draw in alteration lines on the pattern and sew the sample garment for marketing. Once the garment is sent off to New York for photography, I write the instructions for sewing the garment for the consumer. I base the steps on the Palmer/Pletsch books and methods for fitting and sewing.

I sewed the sample garment shown in photo and assisted with guidesheet writing.
